Subject: The University of Scranton: What to do if you need Personal Support?
From: Robert W. Davis, Jr., Ed.D. Vice President for Student Life

April 9, 2020

Dear Students,

The Covid-19 pandemic continues to grip our nation and our world, and we have begun to see it directly affect members of our University community and their families. As a result, I want make sure that you, as students, know how to get support from campus resources.

While this remote learning period has us apart, University resources are still open and available to support you, especially if you are experiencing difficulty.

I strongly encourage students who experience illness, loss of a loved one, or other personal difficulties because of the coronavirus or for any other reason, to reach out to Lauren Rivera, Dean of Students, at (570) 941-7680 or lauren.rivera@scranton.edu to get support and learn of helpful resources.

The Dean of Students Office will gather pertinent information and then, as needed, will work with the respective academic dean's office or advising center to coordinate faculty notifications, academic accommodations, or other necessary support services from offices across campus.

These are unprecedented times that require us to connect in new ways. Please know that the University remains committed to your personal and academic success and we are here to help.

I wish you and your families a Happy Easter!

Sincerely,

Robert W. Davis, Jr., Ed.D.
Vice President for Student Life
